6. People are not the only crowd at presidential inaugurations

Gutogo reports that for Obama's inauguration, there were 5,000 portable toilets on site. Although this seems like a large number, a bit of math reveals that even with this many toilets on site, they had their work cut out for them. The crowd of 1.8 million people required each toilet to serve the needs of 360 individuals. Our applause goes to the men and women who supply these huge events like this!

7. Portable toilets save lots of water and protect the environment

Providing portable toilet rentals is one way that we show our desire to care for and protect God's world through environmentally friendly and sustainable services (see our Recycling program.) The Portable Sanitation Association International reports the following facts:

- 45 billion gallons of fresh water are saved annually through the use of portable restrooms.
- Americans use more water each day by flushing the toilet than they do by showering or any other activity.
- Americans use about 100 gallons of water per day. Europeans use about 50 gallons of water per day. Residents of sub-Saharan Africa use only two to five gallons of water per day.
- A running toilet can waste up to 200 gallons of water per day.
- A portable toilet uses 90% less water than a conventional toilet.

showing has bathroom facilities? Real estate agents and home owners have their reasons. Sometimes the home being shown does not have plumbing connected, making the home's bathrooms unusable. A large reason the agents and owners rent a portable restroom, is simply to help ensure that the home stays in pristine condition. One thoughtless customer could ruin another customer's impression of a home. The next time you are asked to use a portable restroom at a real estate event, don't take it personally. Agents are only doing their job well when they order a portable toilet for an open house. If they rented a portable toilet from Nisly Brothers, then it shows that they are doing their job really well. However, we might be biased.

9. Over or Under? The toilet paper flap debate

According to List Verse, a study that cost more than $100,000 revealed that 3 out of 4 people put the flap in the front of a toilet paper roll. People on both sides of this debate feel so strongly that their way is best, that when they see toilet paper with the flap going the wrong direction, they can't just leave it. They take the roll off, and turn it around, so that the roll is going the "correct" direction. Next time you are using one of our portable toilets, take note of the toilet paper flap to see if your service person is part the majority class or part of the stubborn minority that still insists "under" is the proper way.

10. Ancient portable toilets were put in tombs for use in the afterlife.

Made How reports that the first evidence we have of portable toilets dates back to the mid-fourteenth century B.C. in Egypt. The excavation of the tomb of Kha, a senior Egyption official, revealed a wooden stool with a slot in the middle and a pottery vessel beneath it to catch the waste.

11. Sanitary toilet facilities save lives

List Verse says that a lack of suitable toilet conditions and the unsanitary environment caused by this results in 1.8 million deaths each year. Many of these deaths are children. Sanitation matters!
